Thousands turn to labour ministry for jobs. A significant number of Namibia's unemployed have turned to the ministry of labour's employment website as they search for placement either in the government service or the private sector. The ministry indicated that by 31 October, there were 101,899 job-seekers registered on the Namibia Integrated Employment Information System (NIEIS). According to last year's national statistics by the Namibia Statistics Agency, the country has more than 1.09 million active people who are ready to work, of whom 364,411 (33.4%) could not find jobs at that time. – The Namibian

41% of Namibians want land seized. About 41% of Namibians want the government to expropriate land without any compensation, the latest Afrobarometer report has found. This finding comes at a time when the lands ministry has asked attorney-general Albert Kawana for a legal opinion on the expropriation of land with just compensation. The report further shows that 36% of Namibians want the willing-buyer, willing-seller policy to continue while 16% believe there is no further need for land reform. The second land conference held in October last year resolved to discontinue the willing-buyer, willing-seller principle and to develop an accelerated land delivery method. – Namibian Sun

City delays CBD rejuvenation plan. Property manager Broll Namibia says the City of Windhoek is dragging its feet on a planned rejuvenation project for the city centre. A committee was established in 2017 to steer the rejuvenation process. But project has stalled because the city council has failed to endorse the committee's plans. Broll managing director Terrance Makari says policy regulations that would guide the revival had to be approved by the council. "The first step in ensuring this takes place was to have the City of Windhoek approve the Business Improvement District (BID) regulations which would allow the future CBD entity to be formally recognised and to recover from CBD landlords a levy to be invested in driving enhancement projects within the established CBD area," he said. "This regulation was submitted for municipal council approval during the second half of 2018 and we are still eagerly awaiting approval of same. "Without this approval, the [soon] to be established CBD entity would have no formal or legal rights to operate or charge landlords, nor would it be able to support or contribute to CBD initiatives except within their personal or entity capacities." – Namibian Sun

Attachments a last resort – Agribank. Agribank says when it attaches the property of borrowers it is always as a last resort. "We have a collections policy which is underlined by a process. The process involves reminders to clients at various intervals. The process also allows the bank to enter into repayment arrangements with clients who have fallen into arrears," says Agribank CEO Sakaria Nghikembua. "Any repayment arrangements are then monitored. If the client honours the arrangements, there will never be a need to get to attachment of collateral assets. "We appreciate that honouring a repayment arrangement does not mean that a client is always able to pay 100% of what they have committed," he added. – Namibian Sun

Capture the consumer. In 2013, 70% of consumers planned their shopping. Now, 90% of buyers search the information available to them to plan and decide where they're going to spend their hard-earned dollar to buy products at a decent price. This finding of the Roots 2019 Consumer Behaviour Survey is as applicable in Namibia as it is in South Africa, where the research was done, Lynne Krog, seasoned marketing and research specialist, says. Speaking at a recent Business7 engagement, Food for Thought, Krog described the prevailing retail environment saying: "It's a battlefield out there." When times are bad, less people are buying. And those people who are buying, are buying less, Krog says. In an economy in its third consecutive year of recession, retailers in Namibia know that only too well. The latest data by the Namibia Statistics Agency (NSA) shows that by the end of June this year, wholesale and retail spent 11 consecutive quarters growing negatively. – Business 7

SA Economic News

South African consumer confidence dropped to the lowest level since Cyril Ramaphosa became president as the outlook for the economy dimmed. The consumer-confidence index fell to -7 in the third quarter from 5 in the previous three-month period, FirstRand Ltd.'s First National Bank said on Tuesday. That's the weakest level since the fourth quarter of 2017, when uncertainty over who would take over from Jacob Zuma as leader of the ruling African National Congress weighed on sentiment. With household consumption spending that makes up about 60% of gross domestic product, the drop in confidence could further weigh on an economy that's forecast to expand only 0.5% this year. Slow growth is adding to the state's fiscal woes, as set out in the medium-term budget statement last week, as revenue falls short of estimates and government debt balloons.

The share price of the biggest black-owned and managed real estate investment trust (Reit) listed on the JSE, Delta Property Fund, rallied more than 11.5% on Monday following the release of the group's interim results which showed some improved key trading metrics. This comes despite the group reporting a decline in distributions per share and opting to reduce its dividend payout ratio to 40% for the half-year ending 31 August. Delta, which is currently in takeover talks with Rebosis Property Fund, announced that distributions of 30.48 cents per share were achieved, compared to 39.40 cents for its corresponding 2018 interim period. – Moneyweb

The JSE said on Tuesday it was seeking public input on a proposal to jointly cap Naspers and Prosus at 10% on its capped indices, to alleviate the risks for investors who are tracking them. The unbundling of Naspers and the listing of Prosus on 11 September led to an increased exposure to the overall Naspers stable from 10% to 12.02% in the FTSE/JSE capped shareholder weighted index (swix) allshare index. This index is commonly used by institutional investors, and therefore poses concentration risks, should there be a steep share price fall in Tencent. The JSE imposes capping to reduce single-stock exposure. The JSE is proposing that both would be treated as one entity for capping purposes only, and given their market capitalisations as at the end of October, Nasper's weighting on the swix would fall to 8.45% from 8.64%, and that of Prosus to 1.45% from 3.38%. "The principle would be to construct a ground rule that will resolve any future large single stock exposures by looking at how much the valuation of the subsidiary company holding contributes to the parent company's gross market capitalisation," the JSE said. -Business Day

Sibanye-Stillwater, the world's largest platinum miner, sold one of its concentrator plants at the recently acquired Lonmin assets to underpin and expand production at a mine it shares in Zimbabwe. The Mimosa platinum group metals (PGM) mine in Zimbabwe is an old operation that has been pushed beyond its capacity, and its mill — a large, spinning drum used to break ore into fine material to expose the metal — has broken down unexpectedly. Mimosa's joint owners, Sibanye and Impala Platinum, agreed to the $10m purchase of a concentrator plant currently at the Lonmin — now called Marikana — operations in SA. The plant will be dismantled and hauled to the Zimbabwean mine, 150km east of Bulawayo in southern parts of the country. – Business Day

Telkom lost more than R2bn of its value on Tuesday after the telecoms group issued a profit warning flagging a drop in half-year profit, weighed down by costs related to its investment in its fledgling mobile network. Under CEO Sipho Maseko, Telkom, which runs SA's biggest fixed-line telecom network, is in the middle of transforming itself into a modern telecommunications provider with heavy investments in its mobile phone unit and capitalising on its extensive fibre infrastructure to sell internet services. – Business Day
