Govt urged to ditch Kavango water link project. The Namibian Chamber of Environment (NCE) has urged the government to abandon plans to draw water from the Kavango River to supplement water supplies to Windhoek and central areas. The chamber warned that the river is already exploited by unmonitored green schemes and farms. NCE chief executive Chris Brown says the proposed Kavango Link project is based on a decades-old plan that no longer reflects current environmental, economic and regional realities. Brown says this in an open letter titled Namibia can do better than the Kavango Link project® addressed to prime minister Elijah Ngurare this week. – The Namibian

Namibia lands Africa's largest biomass carbon removal deal. Namibia has secured what is described as Africa's largest biomass geological storage carbon removal deal, with a project near Otjiwarongo contracted to supply 50,000 tonnes of permanent carbon removal credits to European buyers between 2026 and 2028. Berlin-based Carbonsate signed the multi-year agreement with carbon credit procurement company Senken, with deliveries from the Namibia project starting this year. The companies said the agreement is also Europe's largest biomass storage carbon removal deal to date and the second largest buyer commitment globally in the biomass geological storage category. – The Brief

Govt yet to approve transfer of 56 NIDA properties to PAMA. The government has not yet approved the transfer of 56 Namibia Industrial Development Agency (NIDA) properties valued at about N$277 million to the planned Public Asset Management Agency (PAMA), with the Ministry of Works and Transport saying the assets have only been identified for possible centralised management. – The Brief

Namibia's oil reserves estimated at 10 billion barrels after 50 wells drilled. Namibia has drilled about 50 oil and gas exploration and appraisal wells to date, with the country's petroleum resources estimated at around 10 billion barrels, Bank of Namibia Governor Ebson Uanguta has said. Uanguta said about one-third of the estimated resources could be commercially recoverable, highlighting the difference between the volume of petroleum identified geologically and the amount that can ultimately be extracted economically. Uanguta told a public lecture at the University of Namibia that major offshore discoveries since 2022 had positioned oil and gas as an increasingly important part of Namibia's future economic outlook. – Mining & Energy

Absa eyes Angola return and Nigeria banking licence. Absa has its sights set on a return to Angola and is considering a merchant banking licence in Nigeria as it looks to broaden its earnings base beyond its three main markets of South Africa, Ghana and Kenya. The lender is looking to establish a representative office in Angola, Africa's third-biggest oil producer, nearly two decades after it exited the market. Absa has a representative office in Nigeria, though a merchant banking licence would give it access to capital, underwriting, and advisory services in the continent's most populous nation and top crude producer. – Business Day

Copper shines for BHP as it pays highest dividend in four years. Higher copper, iron ore and steelmaking coal prices have boosted BHP's full-year profits, allowing the resources group to cut debt and pay the largest dividend in four years. The Melbourne-based group on Tuesday reported a 27% increase in underlying earnings before interest, tax, depreciation and amortisation (ebitda), a measure that excludes one-off or exceptional items, to $33bn, with copper contributing more than half to the total in the year to end-June. This was the first year most of the goup's underlying ebitda was generated from copper, it said. – Business Day

SA Economic News

Inside South Africa's power price overhaul to save local industries and boost growth. South Africa is overhauling its electricity pricing system to address high tariffs that have soared more than six times the rate of inflation since 2007, hurting industries and eroding households' disposable incomes. Though electricity supply has improved over the past few years, ending years of rolling blackouts to avoid collapsing the grid, electricity & energy minister Kgosientsho Ramokgopa has repeatedly acknowledged that its cost has become prohibitive. "Over a period stretching back to 2007, electricity tariffs have increased by about 907%, and in the corresponding period, inflation has increased by about 150%. The price of electricity is undermining the competitiveness of our industries and is eroding the disposable income of households," he told a media briefing on Tuesday. – Business Day

SADC News

Zambia's Hichilema win gives investors continuity, now they want growth. Zambian President Hakainde Hichilema's re-election hands investors the policy continuity they sought, while negotiations on a new IMF programme provide an early test of whether a second term can turn economic stabilisation into sustained growth. The copper producer is emerging from years of economic turmoil after becoming the first African sovereign to default during the Covid-19 pandemic in 2020. Hichilema's first term was dominated by a lengthy debt restructuring and IMF-backed reforms, while drought, power shortages and a weak currency tested the recovery. – Business Day
