Namcol eyes varsity status by 2029. The Namibia College of Open Learning (Namcol) is working towards transforming into an open university, targeting a formal launch in 2028 or 2029 and promising to expand opportunities for students. Deputy executive director for higher education, training, research and innovation Lisho Mundia says the ministry still needs to seek Cabinet approval before the transformation can proceed. President Netumbo Nandi-Ndaitwah has dismissed the idea of an either-or approach to energy, saying Namibia needs both green hydrogen and oil and gas to drive its development. "It's not a question of choosing between green hydrogen and oil and gas, but rather having a mix where they complement one another," Nandi-Ndaitwah said. The president was speaking to Veronica Bolton Smith, founder and CEO of the Critical Minerals Africa Group, during a one-on-one fireside conversation in New York under the overarching theme 'Powering Business, Scaling Economies, Shaping the Future. South Africa hikes steel tariffs to shield local producers. tariffs as part of wide-ranging measures to shield domestic producers from pervasive imports, particularly from the country's largest trading partner, China. The International Trade Administration Commission of South Africa (Itac) has made preliminary findings to increase the number of steel products that cannot be legally imported into the country unless authorised by an official permit, as it broadens its nontariff and tariff measures to shield the downstream industry. Under the proposed measures, products such as nails, tacks, drawing pins, corrugated nails, semifinished products of iron or nonalloy steel, bars and rods and uncoated flat hot-rolled products of iron or nonalloy steel of a width of 600mm or more will be included in the import control list. – Business Day

SA not overbanked – Investec. South Africa does not have too many banks despite growing competition in this space, according to Investec Bank CEO Cumesh Moodliar. He was responding to a question on a media call on Friday as the dual-listed specialist high-end banking group issued a voluntary trading update. "South Africa is not overbanked," Moodliar said, while acknowledging that the market is not growing in a weak economy. "Particularly if I look at our South African business, it's coming out of taking more market share versus market growth." He admits that this is a "tough operating environment" but believes there is still opportunity – and that "ultimately competition is really good for consumers" in this space. – Moneyweb

Fish shortages hit Lucky Star as Oceana struggles to meet demand. Oceana's Lucky Star business has been hit by shortages of frozen fish, limiting its ability to meet demand and weighing on sales in the 11 months to the end of August. The group said in a voluntary trading update on Monday that its canned food business recorded a 5% decline in total sales volumes, with canned fish volumes falling 9%. The limited inventory meant Lucky Star could not fully meet demand for canned pilchards, according to Oceana. "Shortages of frozen fish raw material constrained canned pilchard availability and slowed sales momentum," it said. – Business Day

Zimbabwe blueberry growers seek finance to tap China market. Zimbabwe blueberry growers seek cheaper finance after China market opens. Zimbabwean blueberry producers are seeking cheaper, longer-term financing to expand output after gaining access to China, as high domestic borrowing costs constrain investment. Forrester Estates, about 100 kilometres north of Harare, plans to more than double its blueberry-growing area to 50 hectares in 2027, AFP reported on September 18. "The funding, that's the problem," farm manager Albert Chakala told AFP. Developing each additional hectare requires between US$50,000 and US$55,000 upfront for irrigation, planting material and other infrastructure. Zimbabwe shipped its first blueberries to China in July after the two countries agreed a phytosanitary protocol in September 2025. The exports also benefit from China's zero-tariff treatment for 53 African countries, which took effect on 01 May. Before China opened its market, Zimbabwean blueberries were already sold in Europe, Britain, the Middle East and several Asian markets.
