South Africa to lift sugar-benchmark price to shield growers. South Africa will raise the benchmark price that's used to calculate duties on sugar imports, a move long-sought by domestic producers like Associated British Foods Plc's local unit in an industry that's been battered by cheap foreign competition, according to people familiar with the matter. Finance Minister Enoch Godongwana signed off on the measure earlier this week and the new level is expected to be announced in the official Government Gazette soon, said the people who asked not to be identified because the decision isn't public yet. The dollar-based reference price for sugar will be increased to $785 a ton, from $680, the people said.

Malawi's agriculture sector is facing a mounting crisis, with damning new figures revealing the country's export base has collapsed by 31 percent in less than a decade, as Minister of Agriculture, Irrigation and Water Development Roza Mbilizi issued a stark call for urgent transformation. Speaking at the official opening of the three-day 22nd National Agriculture Fair in Blantyre, Mbilizi declared it was "high time" Malawi fundamentally changed how it approaches agricultural production, insisting the country must shift focus from simply producing more to producing smarter.
