In December 2024, private sector credit extension (PSCE) rose by N$810.2 million, which translates to a 0.7% m/m increase. Growth in PSCE for December 2024 rose to 4.0% y/y relative to a 3.3% y/y growth in November 2024. After accounting for the interbank swaps documented by the Bank of Namibia (BoN), the post-adjustment cumulative credit outstanding amounted to N$117.13 billion. Over the twelve-month period, the private sector, consisting of corporations and individuals, received a total amount of N$4.50 billion in credit. Segregating these two components results in corporations absorbing an amount of N$2.46 billion in credit, whereas individuals received N$2.04 billion in credit. Negative overdraft lending continued to decline on an annual basis in December 2024, recording a year-on-year decrease of 6.0%.

Credit Extension to Corporates

Growth in credit extended to corporations peaked in December 2024 at 5.4% y/y, the highest annual growth recorded in 2024. This substantial growth can be attributed to the outperformance of two segments, the instalment credit segment which rose by 24.1% y/y and the loans and advances segment which rose by 3.0% y/y. Furthermore, mortgage loans and overdraft lending remain in the negatives, with an annual decline of 0.1% and 7.6% respectively.

Money Supply and Reserves

International reserves increased by 3.6% from N$60.8 billion in November 2024 to N$63.0 billion in December 2024. According to the BoN, this increase is mainly attributable to increases in commercial bank inflows and revaluation gains. Furthermore, this level of international reserves translates into 4.1 months of import cover, while import cover excluding oil and appraisal activities translates to 5.1 months of imports.

Outlook

Annual growth in PSCE, reached a high of 4.0% y/y, the highest since August 2022. This growth was primarily driven by increased credit uptake by businesses. Notably, instalment sales and leasing credit continued to increase due to demand from both corporations and individuals. Liquidity levels in the banking industry have shown persistent incremental increases, further supporting credit growth. Although overdraft lending remained negative, the modest improvement from November 2024, suggests that businesses are gradually settling their overdraft balances. These trends indicate a cautiously optimistic outlook, with business credit demand and stable liquidity levels supporting economic activity.
